

Outdoor Activities You Have to Try While in Park City

Park City, Utah is an outdoor adventurer's dream! Are you looking for the best spots to mountain bike, hike, and recharge outside? Check out these top outdoor attractions in and around your Park City accommodations.

Best Hikes in Park City:

- Jenni's Trail: An intermediate-level trail with panoramic views. Approximately 3 miles in length.
- Iron Canyon Trail: Intermediate level trail, Approximately 2 miles long. We recommend going during mid-September to get panoramic views of the fall colors both on the hike and surrounding Park City from the overlook.
- Farm Trail: Leisurely hike through aspens and meadows, with glimpses of McLeod Creek. The trail is 3.6 miles and perfect at all skill levels.

Epic Mountain Biking in Park City:

- Rail Trail: Easy trail that travels along a historic rail line through rural areas and stunning views. 28 miles one way and is perfect for all skill levels.
- Mid-Mountain Trail: High-elevation trail through dense forest, aspen groves, and wildflowers. 23 miles with a rating of difficult.
- Wasatch Crest Trail: Intense ride for seasoned bikers with numerous, stunning vantage points. 18.1 miles with a rating of difficult.
- Spiro Trail: Groomed trail offering uphill climbs, colorful native flowers, and inspiring views of Park City and the Wasatch Mountains.

Premier Rafting in Park City:

- Weber River: Class II white water rapids with idyllic stretches and wildlife viewing opportunities.
- Provo River: Moderate rapids through picturesque Provo Canyon.

Must-Visit State Parks in Park City:

- Wasatch Mountain State Park: A real Utah playground offering golfing, camping, hiking, horseback riding, and more.
- Rockport State Park: 1,080 acres of water surface perfect for boating, fishing, and water skiing.
- Deer Creek State Park: Popular park with mountain views, great camping, and some of the best fishing near Park City.